

Financial Consolidation

5 tips to a faster, simpler close

1

Integrate your data from various sources & systems

Your company may employ one or more ERP systems, resulting in hundreds or even thousands of entities in a corporate structure, that need to be consolidated.

Find a financial consolidation application that brings the disconnected systems together to create a single set of consolidated results, which provides accurate, quality data.

2

Unify data with more than just a reporting solution

Create more accurate forecasts with precise consolidated data.

Prophix unified solution offers budgeting, planning, forecasting all in one application. Move beyond just closing your books; and use financial consolidation as the springboard to strategic financial analysis and better business decision making.

3

Simplify or streamline your financial consolidation workflow

Since financial consolidation involves multiple inputs and often tight timelines, implement a consistent secure multi-user workflow process. An automated system can notify users when data must be made available and streamline the process.

With Prophix, an integrated workflow can help manage the collection of data and the process of approving adjustments. For example, if a journal entry is rejected, it can be sent back for re-editing.

Don't overlook audit tracking abilities

When it comes to accountability, tracking transactions is crucial.

All financial consolidation activities performed, such as posting data or editing journal entries, should be automatically recorded in an audit log.

Prophix tracks changes made so you can always see a log of every input, change and transaction.

5

Find a solution that speaks multiple currencies

Financial consolidation with multiple currencies is more complex than when there is a single currency and can raise many issues.

Support for multiple currencies including automatic triangulation of exchange rates is essential to proper data management.

There is no limit to the number of exchange rates (i.e. average/month end/historical) and the numerical translation rates can change every month with Prophix.
